The Jean-Nicod Lectures are delivered annually in Paris by a leading philosopher of mind or philosophically oriented cognitive scientist. The 1993 inaugural lectures marked the centenary of the birth of the French philosopher and logician Jean Nicod (1893-1931). The lectures are organized by the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS) as part of its effort to develop the interdisciplinary field of cognitive science in France.

The Jean-Nicod lecturer is expected to spend several weeks in Paris, to deliver at least four lectures on a topic of his or her choice, and subsequently to publish the set of lectures, or a monograph based on them, in the Jean-Nicod Lectures series (MIT Press/Bradford Books; F. Recanati editor).

Since 1996 the annual lecturer is awarded the Jean-Nicod Prize during a ceremony which follows the deliverance of the first lecture. Besides CNRS, the sponsors include two French institutions: Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales (EHESS), and Ecole Normale Supérieure.

The annual lecturer is selected by the Jean-Nicod Committee, which includes (as of 2003) the following:

President

Jacques Bouveresse, Professor at College de France (Paris)

Secretary

François Recanati, Research director, CNRS (Paris)

Other members

Mario Borillo, Research director, CNRS (Toulouse)

Jean-Pierre Changeux, Professor at College de France (Paris)

Jean-Gabriel Ganascia, Professor at the University of Paris-VI

André Holley, Director, Institut des sciences du goût et de l'olfaction (Dijon)

Michel Imbert, Professor at the University of Toulouse
